Armor Option: 00 - Without armor

The combination of probe with integral lead and extension cable is designed to achieve a system length of either five or nine metres from probe tip to Proximitor. Probes are available with integral leads of various lengths to match the average extension cable lengths. Probes and cables of the same lcngth,and Proximitors with the same part number, are completely interchangeable.
For added protection, stainless steel armor is available. It provides improved resistance to physical abuse.

INPUT

Power: -17.5 Vde to -26 Vdc at 12 mAmaximum consumption.

OUTPUT

Calibrated Range: 80 mils (2.0 mm).Begins at approximately 10 mils(0.25 mm) from probe face.

Scale Factor: 200 mV/mil (7.87 V/mm),±4%(measured in increments of10 mils over the calibrated range) ifcalibrated as a system, Within ±9.5%including interchangeability errors.Linearity: Within 0,8 mils (0.02 mm) of a200 mV/mil straight line if calibrated asa system. Within 2.3 mils (0.06 mm) ofa 200 mV/mil straight line includinginterchangeability errors.Frequency Response: 0 to 10 kHz(0 to 600,000 cpm); -5% at 10 kHz(600,000 cpm).

Temperature Sensitivity: Typically-396change in scale factor at + 150°F(+ 65°C) at 50 mils gap (1.27 mm).

ENVIRONMENTAL LIMITS

Operating Temperature:

Proximitor:-60°F to +212°F(-51°Cto +1009C).

Probe and Extension Cable: -30°F to0+350°F(-34°Cto +177°C)Relative Humidity: To 95%,noncondensing.

Corrosion Resistance (for 8 mm probesonly): Probe operation is not affectedby direct contact to the following: air,water, lube oil, ammonium hydroxide,sulfuric acid (10%), MEK(methyl-ethylkeytone)or DMF (Dimethylfor-mamide).
